

FOREWORD

Here it is, the summer of 1986, some 22 years after the Lost in Space pilot was originally filmed. . . . Who'd have thought the show would still be going strong in syndication around the world? ! You never know . . . On February 1 of next year, 1987, Will Robinson will be born. I've got a sneaky feeling that the kid's in for one hell of a life! Along with his family, Don West, and a reluctant stow-away named Zachary Smith, Will's due to encounter everything from one-eyed giants to talking carrots! A group of dedicated folks have assembled this reference manual, as a detailed guide to information on the Robinson expedition that has up to now remained top secret stuff. I certainly know more about Deuteronium Annihilation Drive than I did before having this handy manual! Enjoy. Work for peace.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Bill Mummy", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

Bill Mummy